River Steamer Arrives

After the people interested had begun to fear that there was going to be no steamer this season, owing to the delay, word arrived early in the week that the Port Simpson was starting from the Skeena for this place and yesterday, shortly after 11 o'clock she arrived. There is enough freight on hand at this time to keep her busy for two trips, so the possibilities are that she may make as many as she did last year. Capt. Jackman is in command and Percy Patmore is purser.

Successfully Operated

Drs. Daws and Shurich operated on Mrs. Kiteoon for a running sore Tuesday of this week. The trouble was of old standing, but so successful was the operation that a speedy recovery is looked for by the doctors.

Miss Millie Sylvester, who had been in Seattle since spring, was a passenger home on the Seattle.

Stephen Birch, Esq.,
45 Broadway, New York City.
My dear Sir:

Herewith I enclose (1) a copy of a letter addressed to me by Mr. Reynolds, (2) a copy of a telegram addressed to me by Jones, Thorn, Foster and others of Tacoma, Washington, and (3) my reply to the telegram. I send you these that you may understand the offer that the opposition has made to me and my final disposition thereof.

(Note—At this time Delegate Wickersham was urging the Guggenheims to employ him, because as he stated in former letters, he had been made a proposition by the Reynolds Development company and was holding off. The Reynolds people were held up as a bug-a-boo and by mentioning them, as possible employers, Wickersham thought he would be able to clinch an employment contract with the Guggenheims.)

I am going to practice law. I shall stay here in Fairbanks until spring, although if you or your people should conclude that you can make me an offer that would be reasonable I could come out at any moment during the winter.

Some of my prospecting friends here have located a vein of stibnite in the Kantishna region and they are about to persuade me to take an interest in it with them. You will discover something about it in United States Geological Survey Bulletin No. 314 "Report on Progress of Investigations of Mineral Resources of Alaska in 1906 by Alfred H. Brooks and others" at pages 218, 219 and 220. They have not only located stibnite along Caribou and Last Chance creeks, but running somewhat parallel thereto, from the northeast to southwest, they have also located something like fifty claims along what seems to be an extremely promising vein of gold bearing quartz. Their assays of this quartz give about $100 or more to the ton and they are filled with a good deal of hope.

The stibnite, however, has been prospected by several shafts fifty feet or so in depth. The walls are both in place and the vein is well located and clearly defined, and about four or five feet in thickness. They have spent probably $10,000 in work so far. They want to sell me an eighth interest for $10,000 but I have declined to buy until I can have the matter looked up carefully on the ground. They are now discussing the question of borrowing $5,000 from me with which to carry on their development work for a little while and pay off some of their debts and I may let them have it, at the same time taking an option for the purchase of the interest.

I regret very much that you are not near enough to examine this property for it seems to be a very promising proposition. I will inform you later whether or not I have secured a hold upon it and will consult with you about how to have it examined. They have sent quite a lot of the stibnite to the Selby people of New York and have had a good deal of correspondence with Seligman about it. I wish you would consult with those people about it if you have time and learn what you can of its value.

I regret that I did not see you this summer and fear that I may not do so before next summer when I certainly hope to meet you. Please remember me kindly to Mr. Ralph and Mr. Schultz.

Respectfully,

JAMES WICKERSHAM.

They Refuse To Pose

Despite the allurments offered in the way of trout fishing in "Gartley" creek, Harry Gartley officiated as first assistant and goose-herd to Jack Worden in the latter's attempt to secure the pictures of a batch of goslings at Glacier lake on the Duckland's trip, Sunday, and the adventures of the two while so doing would fill a book. They report hundreds of geese, old and young, in the neighborhood of the glacier which sprays well for this fall's shooting.

Ketchikan To Seattle Race

According to the last Miner from Ketchikan, that town is busily preparing for the motor boat race which is to run between Ketchikan and Seattle during August. A motor boat club has been formed, and big preparations are making in anticipation of the event. It is expected that at least a dozen boats will enter in this the longest race of the kind ever attempted.

The above is a letter written by James Wickersham to Stephen Birch, the head of the Alaska Syndicate. In this letter there stands out as bold a bid for purchase of "influence" as ever was made in America. It savors of the days in Helena when legislators in order that they would vote for Senator Clark for United States senator, were gotten into poker games by Clark men and allowed to win large sums of money—so that they would be "right" when the voting time came. "Some of my prospecting friends have located a vein of stibnite in the Kantishna and they are about to persuade me to take an interest in it," he writes. Then again, "I wish you would consult with these people about it if you have time and learn what you can of its value."

Delegate Wickersham starts off his letter by asking that the Guggenheims employ him. He tells the Guggenheims he has obtained control of a mine some poor prospectors have and which on account of lack of money, they are unable to handle. This defender of the poor miner then goes on to suggest that, if the mines are good things, he will take them over. He wants the Guggenheims to go into the deal with him. Or in bolder and more truthful words Wickersham implies that, through purchasing the property at a good figure, he will go over to the Guggenheims boots, body and breeches.

He would take from the man with no capital the property he has wandered over Alaska for years to obtain; he would turn it over to the Guggenheims, if they would give him employment.

Since going to Washington Delegate Wickersham has been loud in his denunciation of "association" locating. In his letter to Mr. Birch the delegate with much minute description, says, "They have also located something like fifty claims along what seems to be extremely promising gold bearing quartz." The evil of locating indiscriminately when a sale of his influence was being arranged with the Guggenheims did not strike Judge Wickersham so strongly as it does now.

He would do anything to land with the Guggenheims.

The treachery of James Wickersham is unparalleled.—Juneau Record.

Our Next Representative

ED. S. ORR OF VALDEZ
Republican Nominee
FOR DELEGATE TO CONGRESS

Unless all signs fail, relief from the "Old Man of the Sea," James Wickersham, is in sight for Alaska. This paper is in receipt of word from practically every part of the District that the tide has set against Wickersham, and that Ed. S. Orr will be the next man to represent Alaska in the Halls of Congress. In the Iditarod country, with its hundreds of voters Major J. F. A. Strong, the veteran newspaperman, and A. J. Daly, one of the most capable of Alaska's Democrats, both have their coats off and are hard at work for Orr. At Nome, Mayor Cochrane and Dr. E. E. Hill are out striving to defeat Wickersham and elect Orr. Sutherland and Ray succeeded in getting out but a couple of dozen people to the Wickersham rally at Seward last Friday evening, and this in a town which two years ago went overwhelmingly for the present delegate. Both sides acknowledge that O'Connor, the labor candidate, will win in Fairbanks and the Tanana generally. From Cordova the following telegram arrived which speaks for itself:

Cordova, July 16.—Judge John Goodell will leave here on Monday next on the Portland for Southeastern Alaska, where he will make several addresses for the candidacy of Ed. S. Orr. A careful canvass completed in this section shows the Republicans will carry this portion of Alaska by an increased majority over that given Corson last election.

And now we come to Southeastern Alaska—Home. Let us look the matter squarely in the face, which of the two, Wickersham or Orr, will be the better man for this district?

It seems to this paper that the time has come for the men of this region to get together for their own good. For the sake of argument AND NOTHING ELSE, let us say that Boyce and Sutherland were railroaded out of the fat positions they were holding, what is it going to avail you or me or the region in which we live for us to carry the grouch resulting from that removal to the ballot box, and as a matter of pure spite against those responsible for such removal vote to perpetuate in office a man who has proved himself incapable of getting results for the District, or, to bring it nearer home, of benefiting you and me.

Again for the sake of argument, AND NOTHING ELSE, let us say that Shackelford and Clark are all that Wickersham would have us believe them, horns, hoofs and all, who are responsible for the fact, as he claims, of his being unable to get any of his per legislation through. Is it common sense or common wisdom for us to return this man to Congress, who stands, self-confessed, as a failure, when there is a man in the field. Ed. S. Orr, whose honesty and integrity are unquestioned, and who has taken sides with neither faction? Though he was not the candidate of the Shackelford wing of the Republican party at the Douglas convention, still he received the vote of that faction, and the management of the party and the present campaign was turned over to him and his friends in the desire that harmony might prevail. Wickersham said that there must be harmony, but according to his way of figuring it could only be arrived at with him in the throne, and the men supine at his feet, who in the interest of the welfare of the District as they saw it, have labored, without hope of personal gain, in opposition to his theories. Such is his idea of harmony—Wickersham, morning, noon and night—and such will the program continue if he be returned to Washington.

Here, then, is the thing for us to decide, the probabilities are that Orr will carry the District as a whole, that being the case, would it not be better for us to climb into the band wagon, by casting a good strong vote for Orr, and thus be in a position to look upon him as our representative, when, as he surely will be, he is inducted into office at Washington?

Sentiment is all very well, but it won't bring in outside capital to help develop your mine or erect your cold storage plant. This will only come when harmony is restored. If you think the Wickersham brand will subserve you best, vote for him, but if you want to see this your home, progress as it should, and yourself be benefited as you deserve, you will make up your mind to work and vote for Ed. S. Orr.

People For Up River

The Princess May arrived north-bound shortly after nine o'clock Tuesday evening, with considerable freight for Telegraph Creek and quite a number of passengers for the same place. Among the passengers were Western Manager for the Hudson Bay, J. Thompson and wife; Dr. Inglis, wife and family; Miss C. R. W. Moore; Miss E. Baker; F. C. and W. C. Mitchell and Guy Carson. Dr. Inglis and the Misses Moore and Baker go to take charge of the hospital at Telegraph, while the Mitchell Bros. are making their annual trip to their placer properties beyond Telegraph. The third brother, S. Mitchell, who usually accompanied F. C. and W. C. died of pneumonia in Scotland recently.

Boat Expected Shortly

"Billy" Neill writes from the Sound where he has been for some little time, that the launch building for river work will be ready for launching within the next couple of weeks, and will then be started north. The boat, which is of tunnel type, will be a fine one, capable of making at least twelve miles an hour, and as she is being built especially for river work, she should be a big success.

For first class pictures of yourself or your best girl, see Cheney. Announcements are out that John W. Arctander, formerly a prominent lawyer in Minneapolis has opened offices in Ketchikan.

Drumming Up Business

Ike Sowerby, the Juneau insurance man, has been a local visitor this week. He has been drumming up business in his line, and reports good success. The installation of the water system has materially reduced insurance rates in Wrangell, so that they now are about the same as those in any other town of like nature.

Looking bronzed and hearty as the result of the trip, Dr. Emery returned from Telegraph Creek on the Black Fox Monday morning. He reports having a pleasant trip, but says that he is mighty glad to get back to Wrangell again. He says that there is no meat at Telegraph, and a steady fish diet palls on one. The people there are anxiously awaiting the arrival of the river steamer, as supplies of all kinds are running very short.

New Show Cases Arrive

Adolph Engstrom is getting his store into shape, receiving goods on almost every boat. The latest arrival consisted of a couple of fine show cases which would more than pass muster anywhere. Dolph reports business steadily improving since he moved, and says that all for him to do is to have stock to sell and the buyers are bound to come his way. He is certainly getting getting ready to do his part.
